Kyle joined the FutureSense team in February of 2009 as a consultant specializing in the area of quantitative analysis. He has since worked with an extensive array of clients in the areas of compensation, organizational development, and communications. During the past few years, Kyle became a Certified Human Capital Strategist, continued pursuing higher education in finance and accounting, and as of January 2011, has begun the MSA program (Masters of Science in Accounting) at San Diego State University. He continues to bring his unique millennial perspective and wide variety of skills to help organizations find their way in the dynamic 21st century workplace.

Kyle joins FutureSense from the Capital Group Companies, where he worked as an Adviser Marketing Representative. He offered sales, marketing, and technical support to financial advisers across the country within the American Funds products. His professional experience also includes an internship with Unified Financial Group, where he successfully completed his primary task of researching, developing, and implementing a solution to a project concerning recycling sales leads for the mortgage consultants while also working alongside senior loan consultants to learn the intimate details of the mortgage industry.

Kyle graduated from the University of California, San Diego, with a joint degree in Mathematics and Economics. While studying at UCSD, he was a member of the surf team, a student supervisor for UCSD Catering, and a devoted math tutor. He established his own private tutoring business and also provided assistance to the TRIO outreach program, a college prep summer camp at UCSD for low-income, minority high school students.

Kyle currently resides with his wife, Colby, and English bulldog, Grom, in San Diego, Ca, where he enjoys surfing, cycling, basketball, golf and traveling. He is an active member of the Surfrider Foundation, a non-profit grassroots organization dedicated to the protection, preservation and enjoyment of our world's oceans, waves and beaches. Kyle is determined to make a positive impact on his friends, community, and future clients.
